Croatian Marinas

Croatia's Adriatic coast, from the westernmost point of the Istrian peninsula to the southernmost reaches of Dalmatia, is one of the most evocative natural destinations for those who love the sea and who wish to experience the primeval touch of a natural environment with a thousand faces.

This craggy coastline is redolent with the intoxicating fragrances of wild Mediterranean herbs, trees and shrubs such as rosemary, laurel, immortelle, Spanish broom and the strawberry tree that blend with the scents of garden sage, mint, wild thyme and other aromatic herbs of the nearby slopes. The olive, that eternal symbol of time and space, can be found almost everywhere.

Even where nature is markedly lacking in soil man has found a way to protect it by building kilometres of long drystone walls which meander through the secluded glades of islands girdled by the azure sea. That sea, transparently blue, with its atavistic aromas of salt and algae, with rippling wavelets caressing a shore lined with pristine beaches and precipitous cliffs, reflects the sunlight like a dazzling diamond. A thousand islands, islets and reefs, secluded coves and bays, and green pine forests seem as if they are moving down to greet that miraculous marine world - down to the sea, an immutable secret waiting to be discovered, all the while keeping a weather eye out for its sometimes unpredictable whims.

The winds on the Adriatic should never be treated lightly, particularly the bora in the Kvarner Bay and the Velebit Channel. Other winds can be somewhat less strong, although their strength varies along the northern and southern coasts. For example, the landward-blowing maestral, which makes for pleasant sailing along the Istrian coast, especially in the Summer, becomes stronger as it moves south towards Dalmatia. The sirocco, a southerly wind, is more predictable.

It is always possible for sailors to find safe shelter in one of the many well-protected bays or coves. However, it is marinas which provide the best shelter and protection. The 51 marinas listed in this publication have the most modern equipment and provide technical assistance and quality servicing for the repair and maintenance of all types of vessels. In addition, the marinas have a wide range of other facilities, including excellent cuisine in the many restaurants that are well known to yachtsmen. The marinas are evenly spread out along the coast, sometimes only a few hours sail away from each other. They give the feeling that safety is always near at hand and they provide the possibility of meeting kindred spirits from all parts of Europe.

Many Croatian marinas are situated close to historic towns, true treasures of history and cultural heritage, towns filled with museums, galleries, churches, palaces and monasteries. Their streets and shops become stages for contemporary cultural events, concerts, folklore and artistic performances. A joie de vivre and the meeting of a plethora of different languages are vibrant, living proofs of the cosmopolitan nature of the Mediterranean.

From Umag in the north to Cavtat in the south there are more than 50 marinas, 21 of which are ACI (Adriatic Croatia International Club) marinas. The others are either independent or owned by hotel and tourist companies. Almost all of the marinas are open year-round. They provide all of the usual nautical services, and some of them also provide the required administrative services (border police, customs, Harbour Master's Office, etc.).

Because of its position near the heart of Europe, the Croatian coast can be easily reached by boat or aircraft, especially from Italy, with which it is connected by numerous ferry lines. For those coming by land, the modern A1 motorway ensures a comfortable and significantly shorter trip. Many yachtsmen prefer to cruise in their own yachts because they know that Croatia's marinas provide all the necessary services. Those who elect to rent their vessel will have a choice that ranges from sailing boats to motorized yachts from any of the many charter companies operating within almost all of the marinas. The desire for relaxation, especially on weekends, and hopefully for a while longer, has become a need for modern man that must be satisfied - and not only during the Summer. Spring and Autumn offer many advantages while nature is still filled with the surprises of its beauty, permanent yet always different. The days are somehow less frenetic and more peaceful; the sunlight pleasantly soft; the sea barely rippled. From time to time the waters are broken by a leaping dolphin, an unmistakable testimony to the clarity of the sea.

In this publication, the Croatian National Tourist Board is pleased to present to those who love sailing images of the marinas that line the Croatian seacoast, which offers the very best for your holiday: romantic coves and sheltered beaches, superb sailing and a natural environment in which to relax and enjoy the widely renowned gastronomic offer and seafood specialties. The clear, blue Croatian Adriatic, its 1,000 islands and isles, its historic, charming small towns and villages, and its picturesque landscapes all wait to be discovered and explored - whether by sea or by land.

The Croatian National Tourist Board and its extensive network of nationwide offices offer a range of informative materials that are always at your disposal. We wish you a blissfully pleasant trip, safe navigation - and a fair wind in your sails!

Last but not least, in addition to the secrets revealed by the sea along your route, we hope that you will take away with you one other authentic experience and image: unspoiled nature and "the Mediterranean as it once was".

OLIVE ISLAND MARINA

44°05'44" N 15°10'32" E VHF CHANNEL 17

OLIVE ISLAND MARINA - located in a naturally protected cove in Sutomišćića, on the island of Ugljan. The name of the marina imparts a blend of traditional activities: olive cultivation, culture and sport. Traditional materials, such as wood and stone, combined with those of more modern times, notably steel and glass, create an environment where traditional and hi-tech architecture merge into a harmony between an earthly environment and a kind of imaginary space. Open: Year-round.

Berths: The marina has 215 berths in the sea, all supplied with water and electricity connections (16 A, 32 A, and 63 A). On dry land there are only 25 berths, which are used for the servicing of vessels.

Facilities: Reception, restaurant, sanitary facilities (WC & showers), bar, laundrette, nautical gear shop, grocery store, servicing workshop, 35 t travel lift, WLAN, video monitoring, parking, bicycle and scooter rentals. The nearest fuel pump is located in Preko, around 2 nm away.

Transport links: The island of Ugljan is only a 20 minute ferry ride from Zadar, but the marina also offers a privately run direct return service to Zadar. From Zadar, ferry lines provide links with the nearby islands and with Italy (Ancona).

Zadar International Airport provides good connections with all of Europe.

Modern highways link the city with Split (which also has an international airport), Zagreb, Slovenia and Austria.

There is an infirmary in the village, with fast boat transport to a hospital on the mainland, as well as a bank and a post office. The nearest fuel station is in the ferry port, 0.5 nm from the Preko Marina. The island and the village itself offer opportunities for numerous sports activities such as water sports, sports fishing, angling, diving, mountain biking and trekking. In the season tourists can enjoy many traditional festivities and entertainment programmes. The marina also has a large restaurant and lounge bar with a large outdoor terrace from which a view opens up on Zadar and the Zadar Channel.

Transport links: Preko is 2.5 nm from the mainland - the port of Zadar. There are regular ferry lines Zadar – Preko (Ugljan) and Tkon (Pašman) – Biograd, and the journey time is around 20 minutes. Regular bus lines link all the parts of the islands of Ugljan and Pašman.

The Preko Marina also offers its guests a 4-5 minute speed boat ride to Zadar and back. The nearest international airport is Zadar, which is linked by direct flights to all major European cities. The airport also handles private flights. A modern road network ensures a speedy arrival to Zadar from all parts of Croatia and Europe. The city also has very good ferry links with the town of Ancona in Italy.
